If you like privacy and your own private pool, you'll like Villa Madeleine, where villas flow downhill from a West Indian plantation greathouse. Each villa has a full kitchen. The decor varies from privately owned unit to unit, with some evoking the property's natural surroundings with rattan furniture and bamboo four-poster beds while others feature a more contemporary style. A path leads from the south side of the property to the beach at the Divi resort, but be forewarned that it's a steep climb back up at the end of the day. You definitely need a car for sightseeing. There are various ways to rent a unit: some owners rent out units themselves on VRBO and other sites, others use stateside companies, and a few have local management companies. Search the Internet to find a unit that suits you or contact the company directly.
